BRIDGE is a parish, and head of a union, giving its name to a rural deanery; it derives its name from its situation in a valley on the Roman and modern road to Dover, at a bridge over a feeder of the Stour, and has a station on the Canterbury and Folkestone line of the South Eastern and Chatham railway and is $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles south from Bekesbourne station and $2\frac{1}{2}$ south-east from Canterbury, in the Eastern division of the county, lathe of St. Augustine, hundred of Bridge and Petham, Canterbury county court district, rural deanery of East Bridge, archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury. The village is lighted with gas by a local limited company. The church of St. Peter is an edifice of flint, in the Norman style, with some additions of the Early English period, and consists of lofty chancel, nave of three bays, aisles, a transept in the centre of the north aisle and a tower with shingled spire at the west end of the south aisle, containing 4 bells and a striking clock by Gillett, Bland and Co. Croydon: the windows are stained, the church was extensively repaired and partly rebuilt about 1860 by the late Mrs. Gregory, of Bridge Hill: the north aisle is very low and narrow and is divided from the nave by three rude pointed arches with large wall piers destitute of capitals: the south arcade has been removed: on the north side of the chancel arch is a hagioscope with two square apertures, and in the interior north wall of the chancel remains the tympanum of an arch with sculpture of early date in two ranges of compartments, those in the lower range representing: 1. Adam and Eve expelled from Paradise; 2. Adam and Eve with the Forbidden Fruit; 3. Cain's offering; 4. Abel's offering; 5. The death of Abel; with these inscriptions are intermixed; in the same wall, within a recess, is a recumbent effigy of a man in robes, in low relief, the figure divided in two parts by a central pier: there are 350 sittings, 80 being free. The register dates from the year 1565. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the vicarage of Patribourn, joint average value from tithe rent-charge £323, with 33 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Marquess Conyngham, and held since 1898 by the Rev. Hubert Knight M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, who resides at Patribourn. The Wesleyan chapel, built in 1894, is of corrugated iron and wood and seats 150 persons. The principal landowners are the Marquess Conyngham, who is lord of the manor, Earl Sondes and Matthew Bell esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Bourne Park, Bishopsbourne. The soil is chalky; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and hops. The area is 1,168 acres; rateable value, £3,346; the population in 1901 was 775, including 95 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

CHARTHAM, with HORTON.

CHARTHAM is a parish and village near the road from Canterbury to Ashford, on the river Stour, amid a fertile vale and pastures, with a station on the Ashford and Ramsgate branch of the South Eastern railway, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Canterbury, 11 north-east from Ashford and 67 from London, in the Eastern division of the county, lathes of St. Augustine and Scray, Felborough and Westgate hundreds, Bridge union, Canterbury county court district, petty sessional division of Horne, West Bridge rural deanery and Canterbury archdeaconry and diocese. Chartham is built round a green, with the parsonage and church on the south side of it. The church of St. Mary is a long and narrow cruciform building of flint, stone and brick, chiefly in the Early Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, transepts, south porch and a battlemented western tower of Perpendicular date, containing a clock and 6 bells: the chancel windows are all very elegant and retain much of the original stained glass, and this part of the church is also rich in sepulchral remains, principally brasses: these include: 1. a fine brass on a grey slab of a knight, cross-legged and clad in mail, with a surcoat and shield emblazoned with the arms of Septvans and a Lombardic inscription, now imperfect, to Sir Robert de Septvans, 1306; this brass is remarkable as being one of the earliest known examples and has been engraved in Boutell's "Monumental Brasses;" 2. a very small brass of a priest, representing Robert London, a former rector, 1416, also engraved in the same work; 3. a brass of Robert Sheffield, a former rector, in surplice and almuce, 1508; 4. a brass of Robert Arthur, a
