neighbourhood of our army, not it is thought to oppose, as it is scarce probable they can be so rash to imagine eight thousand regulars, with 30 pieces of ordnance, are so easily to be defeated by a rabble; but it is conjectured their intention is to treat on a final adjustment for this war, finding we are so much superior to what we have formerly been in this part of the world, besides a reinforcement from Madras, now at this place, of 700 European infantry and artillery, to join Gen. Goddard as he passes, and the hourly expectation of the arrival of two battalions of seapoys from Pondicherry, so that if matters are not concluded perfectly satisfactory, we have, at last force enough to oblige the Ministers to relinquish the usurped government of this country, and put the same into those hands most entitled to it.

There have been several instances, and that not long since, of bankers clerks being missing, who have been supposed to have gone off with the property that they have been entrusted with; but it is more than probable, that they have met with a similar fate to that which had so nearly befallen the clerk of Messrs. Wright, Smith, and Gray.

A letter from Derby, August 2, says, "Yesterday morning a desperate scheme was discovered by the keeper of our county gaol; the felons in his custody, were near accomplishing their escape, their plan was, when the Turnkey came to open their dungeon in the morning, to let them out into the yard, instantly to have seized him, and, if any resistance was made, to have murdered him; but, if he had tamely submitted: to have locked him in the

He is now in Stafford gaol, and is to be dispatched to Sir John Fielding, to be tried there. The real name of this impostor is unknown; he was a soldier in the 14th regiment of foot; the unfortunate person who he murdered was Robert Seilly, of Pembury, in Kent, whose brains he beat out with a hammer, and then cut his throat.

NEWHAVEN.

LONDON, Aug. 31, 1780.

To the Worthy FREEMEN of the City of CANTERBURY.

GENTLEMEN,
AN immediate Dissolution of Parliament being expected, I presume to offer myself as a Candidate for the Honor of being chosen your Representative on the new Election which will immediately follow. I tender you my Services as an Inhabitant of this City where I have passed the greater Part of my Life; and as I have derived the chief Credit of it from my Situation there, I trust and hope you cannot doubt of my sincerest Concern for the Good and Prosperity of the City of Canterbury in particular, as well as of our Country at large. You may be assured I shall ever persevere in an unshaken Adherence to our excellent Constitution, a due Attention to the Liberty of the Subject, and a disinterested Desire of an uncorrupted Representation of the People in Parliament; my Views and Conduct shall also, during our present critical Condition, be invariably directed to the national Safety and Security.

I remain, Gentlemen and Fellow Citizens,
Your most obliged and most obedient Servant,
CHARLES ROBINSON.

CANTERBURY, Sept. 1, 1780.

To the Worthy FREEMEN of the City of ROCHESTER.

GENTLEMEN,
AS the unexpected Dissolution of the late Parliament will prevent Mr. GREGORY (who is at present in Ireland) from making a personal Application, his Friends hope, that his upright and independent Conduct in Parliament will secure him a Continuance in your Esteem; and that you will favour him with your Votes on the Day of Election.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 1, 1780.

THE worthy and Independent Freemen of the City of ROCHESTER are requested not to engage their Votes for the ensuing Election, as, beside Mr. GREGORY, another Gentleman, of independent Fortune, and firm'y attached to the Principles of our Constitution, will soon personally offer his Service.

September 1, 1780.

FRIDAY, Sept. 1.
LONDON.

THE report so current yesterday that the Parliament would be dissolved this day, we are enabled from authority to assure our readers is literally the fact, the ministerial members having declared that their franks are no longer of any avail.

Last night arrived at his house in Great Ormond-street, from Bath, the Right Hon. the Lord Chancellor. His Lordship's sudden departure from Bath is supposed to have been occasioned by the present sudden dissolution of Parliament.

There were so many expresse sent off on Wednesday night to every part of England, that horses

CANTERBURY, Sept. 1.

A letter from Ramsgate, Aug. 18, by the earnest desire at all times to communicate to you the best information in my power, has caused me to be very particular in my enquiries about the destination of the Russian fleet; and I can now, on the most authentic grounds, assure you their route follows.

"The first division, under Admiral Knowles, is gone to cruize between the Texel in Holland and Flamborough Head, in order to protect, not the Ruffians, but the ships of all neutral Powers from being searched by all the English cruizers.

"The other thirteen which anchored at the south end of the Goodwin, and sailed down the Channel, are destined to go together as far as Cadiz, where they will divide, one division taking the route to the Mediterranean, where they will make their rendezvous, for the same purpose of protecting the neutral flags; the other will return, and continue cruizing from Cadiz to the mouth of the English Channel.

"This last is to return soon enough to join the fleet off the Texel, when both are to go back to the Baltick before the winter sets in. There are no friendly symptoms for Old England."

The following is a correct state of the match of cricket played on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday last, in Bourn Paddock, between Hampshire, with two men given, and All England, for One Thousand Guineas.

Yesterday a respectable meeting of the independent freemen of the city of Rochester was held at the King's Head in that city, at which it was unanimously agreed to support Mr. Gregory at the ensuing election, and another candidate of independent fortune, and firmly attached to the principles of the constitution.

 Where Virtue points the way;
 But in this sublunary sphere,

 In vain we court her stay.

 What all the blifs we find?

A C A R D,

To the Author of the Anonymous Advertisement of July 6.

IN consequence of your request to the Freeholders of Kent to keep their votes disengaged, many attended the meeting at the Assizes, imagining that this Time would be thought the most proper for declaring the Pretensions of the Candidate in nubibus, to the support of the county—but though a very respectable number of Freeholders of all ranks attended, no Candidate was named—I therefore conclude you have dropped your ill concerted plan, and that you do not mean to disturb the peace of the county—We are perfectly well satisfied with our two worthy and joint Candidates Mr. Marsham and Mr. Honeywood, and though it is rumoured, this Candidate in petto is to have the strong support of Administration, we in our consciences believe that all their and your manœuvres will be to little purpose to defeat the claim which the manly and disinterested Conduct of our worthy Candidates has upon every unbiassed and

L O N D O N.

THE arrival of the Proserpine frigate at Falmouth, with dispatches from Admiral Geary, is confirmed from the best information we have been able to obtain;
 we assure the public, brings only a detail of the proceedings of the fleet till the time she left it, without any one important piece of news whatever. In consequence of the adverse winds, the Proserpine was near a month on her passage to England.

Our readers may depend upon it, that no publick
 news of an interesting nature, was yesterday received by Government.

The birth day of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is to be kept to-morrow at Windsor, where a numerous concourse of the Nobility are expected,
 on the occasion of the day.

received down by Mr. B. and his party. We never had the love of the English since we took up arms;
 it was only the pernicious views of faction there, that misrepresented matters here. But this is not a time to prove the cursed cause of the present state of affairs.

"In the name of God, I then conjure them to give up the contest, and seek, in an humble submission, that peace which our arms can never restore. We may again be reinstated in tranquility, and whilst we mourn the relatives slain, we will pray that in their deaths all animosity with England may for ever lie buried. The thoughts of the people will soon be turned to industry; and as our amity with Great Britain would close the scene of war with France and Spain, the ports of Europe would again be opened.
 Do, Sir, represent these matters, and in my name desire, that the last letter I sent may be again referred to. It contains such truths relative to the state of our credit, and the impossibility of carrying on the war, as must convince if seriously attended to.

"I pray God to direct the Resolves of Congress for the best; and that they may, with my eyes, see inevitable destruction to America, in a shameful and total overthrow of her army, if the voice of peace does not immediately stop the victorious troops of Clinton.

I am, &c. G. WASHINGTON.
 Mr. Hancock.

CANTERBURY, Aug. 12.

On Thursday next, the 17th instant, the horses
 enter for the Members Plate, value 50l. the City Plate, value 50l. and the County Subscription Plate, value 50l. at Bridge-hill-house, between the hours
 of four and seven.

The horses for the King's Plate enter as usual, between the hours of four and six, on Tuesday, the day before running, agreeable to his Majesty's plate articles.

For particulars of the Sweepstakes of 120 guineas,
 and the Subscription of 110 guineas, see the advertisement the beginning of this page.

We are assured from the best authority, that Government will next week begin to pay off three months navy bills.

By different accounts from the country, we hear,
 that the lightning on Tuesday night has done considerable damage; particularly at West Hith, seven sheep and two cows were struck dead; near Deal the head of a barn was split from top to bottom; and a vessel near Sandwich considerably hurt.

Extra of a letter from Deal, August 11, 1780.

"Last night five Russian ships of the line and a large frigate arrived in the Downs; the largest ship mounts 70 guns, and carries a Rear Admiral's flag at her mizen top-mast. The wind having continued to blow very strong at E.N.E. none of their boats have been yet able to come on shore. Various are the surmises on the appearance of so formidable a fleet, but the most probable conjecture is, that they are sent to protect the neutral trade in the North seas, but were driven into the Downs by contrary winds.

"In the violent storm of thunder and lightning
 on Tuesday night last, a small barn near the outskirts of the town, was struck by the lightning and very much shattered, a great many of the boards were shattered to pieces, and some of them forced to the distance of several rods from the building; two pigs that were in an adjoining sty were killed, and the hair of another much singed. At present we do not hear of any other damage being done hereabouts."

the Princess Sophia Augusta, were at morning prayers in the Chapel Royal; at which were also the Duke of Montague, the Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, with other attendants on the Royal Family, and a great number of ladies and gentlemen, who were come to Windsor on occasion of its being the birthday of the Prince of Wales. After prayers the Queen met his Majesty, &c. at the door of her house, and the company that followed the King from the chapel, had the pleasure of seeing their Majesties, and eight of their children, standing at the door, whilst the King talked some minutes to the Duke of Montague, the Bishop of Litchfield, and some other persons. Their Majesties then retired to breakfast; after which the King, the Prince of Wales, and the Prince Bishop, took an airing on horseback. About half past two o'clock the Royal Family appeared at the windows in the Castle over the Terrace, on which was assembled a vast company of gentlemen and ladies; and opposite to the Terrace four companies of the Royal Scots, and two pieces of cannon were drawn out and fired three rounds in honour of the day; after which the Royal Family retired, and immediately the company went to their abodes to dinner.

The Lord Mayor, with several of the Aldermen and their Ladies, were expected on the Terrace, but their barge ran aground, and did not get up to Windsor till four o'clock; and dined at the White Hart, and in the evening several of the Aldermen and their Ladies returned in the city navigation barge to Staines, but the Lord Mayor staid.

At seven in the evening his Majesty, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Prince Bishop, the Princess Royal, the Princess Sophia Augusta, three of the young Princes, with the Duke of Cumberland, appeared on the terrace, and walked until eight o'clock, while the Queen's band played several pieces of music. His Majesty, and all the Princes, as well as the principal Nobility, attendants on the Court, were in one uniform, viz. blue faced with scarlet. The Duke of Cumberland walked next after the King, with the Prince of Wales leaning on his right arm, and the Prince Bishop upon his left. The persons of quality, who were on the terrace to congratulate the King on this occasion, were very numerous and full-dressed. They formed into small parties, and the honor of being familiarly conversed with by his Majesty.—The Lord Mayor was on the terrace, but our correspondent does not say he was particularly noticed, being in an undress. In the evening there was a concert in the Queen's apartment.

Windsor was full of Company; and the houses were illuminated very superbly; and at Datchet fireworks were displayed by Mr. Angelo, assisted by Mr. Clithero.

A morning paper says, it was on Sunday reported, that advice was received from Admiral Geary, of his having gained intelligence of the combined fleets being seen cruising between Cape Ortegual, and Cape Finimere; and that he had called a council of war in consequence of it, when it was unanimously agreed to leave the Bay, and immediately proceed in quest of them; and as the wind was then exceeding fair, we have reason to expect some news of an action every hour.

A letter from Gosport, Aug. 11, says, "Arrived the Garland, a 20 gun ship, from the Downs; she is appointed to go with the convoy bound to Quebec."

* The Second Squadron now riding at anchor in the Downs.

Sixteen horses, are already arrived at Bridge-hill and Bridge-street, and many more are expected.—Thirteen passed through this city on Monday.

That the Prince of Wales came of age on Saturday is a mistake. Though the King is at age at eighteen, the Prince of Wales is not so till twenty-one, like other Peers, and his present Majesty, when heir apparent, did not take his seat in the House of Peers till 1759, when he was twenty-one complete.

Yesterday was married at the parish church of St. Paul, William Hougham, Esq; son of William Hougham, of Barton, in this neighbourhood, Esq; to Miss Robinson, daughter of Charles Robinson, Esq; Recorder of this city.

Monday last was married Mr. Watts, Surgeon, of Cranbrook, to Miss Walter, of the same place.

Saturday last died, aged four score, Mr. Hunt Chandler, many years a Butcher in the parish of St. Andrew in this city.

Secret dispatches have been sent off last Saturday to Admiral Geary, giving him information of the arrival of the Russian Squadron in the Channel, with particular instructions how to behave to them, if they should attempt an entrance into Brest.

The freeholders of this kingdom should, against the approaching election, bear this truth constantly in mind, that every vote given in behalf of an improper representative, is the means of betraying the voters own rights, besides those of the whole nation.

A letter from Reading, Aug. 12, says, "About half past three o'clock this afternoon, Richard Odcroft, for horse-stealing, and James Sansum, for a burglary, were carried in a cart from our gaol to the place of execution, attended by the Rev. Mr. Webster, the ordinary, in a coach; Odcroft prayed the whole way to the gallows, but Sansum appeared quite insensible of his unhappy situation; when they arrived at the place of execution Mr. Webster attended them in prayer for a considerable time; and about five o'clock they were launched into eternity. Odcroft prayed very fervently, and behaved with uncommon composure and resignation; he was a handsome well made man about 34 years of age, and had his hair dressed and powdered; he wore his shroud to the gallows, ornamented with flowers down the breast, and had a nosegay in his hand. Sansum was about 40 years of age, and made a most miserable appearance. During his illness in gaol, he obstinately refused every kind of assistance, hoping to put a period to his existence, to prevent his suffering so ignominious a death."

On Saturday a bankrupt was, after an examination of near ten hours, committed to Woodstreet compter by the Commissioners at Guildhall, for not giving a satisfactory account of his estate and effects. The deficiency was about 2000l. 1400l. of which he said was expended within one year in the purchase of lottery tickets, which turned out unsuccessful. He was closely interrogated by the Solicitor, who attended on behalf of the creditors, as to the particulars of this unfortunate expenditure, but gave a very vague answer to every question. He could not recollect of whom he bought the tickets; they were the last stake of a man involved in his circumstances, under a hope of repairing his tottering situation, and what (his counsel insisted) was no uncommon recourse with such tradesmen as are desperate frequently are known to fly to. The bankrupt declared that he purchased the tickets promiscuously at Jonathan's coffee-house of several brokers. He acknowledged to have been very extravagant in household expences, and it turned out upon investigating the list of creditors, that the bankrupt had profited by an amour with a lady who had advanced him several hundred pounds without any kind of security whatever. The Solicitor under the commission treated the story of the lottery tickets as designed to elude a strict scrutiny into the real disposition of so large a sum; and with regard to the intrigue he hinted that the female character introduced might be meant to weigh against the bona fide creditors, in point of the aggregate amount of the debts so as to procure a certificate. The bankrupt's Counsel contended, that his client had given an account, and however incautious and imprudent he had conducted his affairs, that was not the question before the Commissioners, they had no power to hold or punish him. In their capacity they sat to hear and receive a state of facts: the creditors were the persons to exercise a discretion upon those facts, and they held the rod of punishment in their own hands, for they were enabled to inflict an insupportable punishment, by a refusal to sign his certificate. He run over the parts of the examination of the bankrupt, and with some warmth endeavoured to reconcile the whole. He disavowed every TUESDAY, Aug. 22. LONDON.

ADMIRAL Geary has orders to put to sea again with his fleet, the instant they have taken their beer, water, and provisions on board, which, he writes word will be compleatly effected in a week, by which time the Russian Squadron will have gone for Brest.

A private letter from Portsmouth says, that all hands are employed in watering and victualling Admiral Geary's fleet, that he may put to sea again as soon as possible.

Sunday morning early a messenger arrived at the Admiralty, with an account of a French ship of 64 guns being taken, after a smart engagement, by Captain Macbride, which is brought into Portsmouth.

Letters from France give an account that the Choiseul, frigate built privateer, of 32 guns, was lost off Ushant the 3d instant, about two o'clock in the morning, and but very few people saved, among whom were the Captain and four officers; her crew consisted of 280 men.

that the India Company never insure; so that the underwriters have not been such great sufferers as was at first imagined.

It was yesterday reported on the Royal Exchange that the last India ships expected home this year, will remain in India, and not proceed to England till their return shall be less hazardous.

It appears from the most respectable information, that the late unfortunate capture of our East and West India ships, was an event no way ascribable to any superiority of naval knowledge or policy in our enemies, or of deficiency of conduct in any of the British commanders or Captains, but from a mere accident; the combined fleets having been driven out of their intended track, were on their return to port, when they met with our convoy and fleet, nor can they have the least pretence to bravery in conquering the unarmed; at best they may be considered as no other than the casual finders of things before they were lost.

"I am sorry to inform you of our being the messengers of the worst news England has for some time received.
