As a proof of it, I need only mention, that two houses in Maidstone have offered to begin the Subscription with a thousand pounds, viz. Messrs. Brenchley, Stacey and May, Brewers, 600l. and the Kentish Bank, 400l. But for effecting this, 5000l. will be necessary. If the public come forward handsomely, and join with the Town in the Subscription, it may no doubt be accomplished this way. And I agree, that it is on all accounts the most preferable.

I have the honor to be with great regard, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient Servant,
Maidstone, Feb. 21, 1791. PLACATOR.

To the Printers of the KENTISH GAZETTE. On FOXES and FOX-HUNTING.

IN your paper of the 11th instant, I was not a little pleased to find a very sensible letter, under the signature of A Farmer, complaining, (and I think very justly) of the great depredations committed by foxes and fox-hunters, to the no small injury of all good husbandry; and in yesterday's Gazette I find a well written paper, signed X, purporting to be a kind of answer to his several complaints; but be this champion of the hunt whom he (perhaps I might have said she) will, has not, as I naturally expected, tried to palliate the matter, but in a manner to ridicule the attempt that the poor Farmer has made to rid himself of so noxious an animal, and his still more destructive pursuers; but though this Goliath, this doughty champion of the fox-hunt, has started up, and seems to bid defiance to the whole tribe of husbandmen, I hope the Farmer supporting the good cause, will not be easily intimidated, but will man-fully stand forward and convince this modern Goliath, that the supporter of a good and just cause will be an overmatch for power and greatness.

This Champion says, the hunt consists of gentlemen of the first consequence in the county, and that they are possessed of ample fortunes, generous minds, good hearts, and sound understandings. I will readily admit this to be the case, but at the same time must say, how strangely then are such great qualities perverted; and how unfortunate it is for their country, that such abilities should be so employed; when I will venture to assert, that there are men among the lowest class to be found, and who are positively deficient in the aforesaid qualifications, that would for a trifling reward, destroy by far more foxes in a year, and without doing the smallest injury to the farmer. I think therefore if these gentlemen of the hunt, who are in possession of that liberal mind and good understanding their champion boasts of, and which I have no wish to deny, would but give themselves one moment's time to consider on the subject, they must be perfectly convinced how truly ridiculous it is, for a large party of the first gentlemen of the neighbourhood, to be galloping about the country with their whole train of huntsmen, whippers-in, earth-stoppers, servants, labourers, &c. &c.
spending a whole day in the pursuit of a poor insignificant animal, who has no mode of defence to call forth their courage, and whose destruction might have been brought about for so trifling a reward as half a guinea. For shame then, Gentlemen, let not your time be so miserably murdered, but let your country derive a greater advantage from

Mr. Pitt has pledged himself one way or other on the subject respecting the repeal of the penal statutes against Roman Catholics. He has only given his opinion that if the motion resembles that brought in last year respecting the Test Act, he will oppose it in its present form and shape.

Thomas Jones Prichard, M. A. Minister of the Protestant Church there.

To John Cole, Esq. Chairman of the Meeting held at the Star in Maidstone, on the 14th instant, and to Thomas Turner and Stephen Amhurst, Esqrs.

PERMIT me, Gentlemen, to address you thus publicly, and through you the body of Farmers, who at this time stand forward to oppose the bill, about to be brought into Parliament, for PAVING, LIGHTING, WATCHING and CLEANSING the streets of the TOWN of MAIDSTONE; and previous thereto to remark, that it is my wish in this (having the honor of being personally acquainted with each of you) to heal, if possible, rather than widen the breach that seems at present to be made, by a clause in the said bill for erecting of turnpikes round the town.

Nobody, I believe, will deny that Maidstone in its foot and carriage pavements, is inferior to most other places of equal size and consequence, and indeed far behind every large town in this County in those respects. It will not then be wondered at, if the Inhabitants wish to place their town (and perhaps it is commendable in them so to do) on a footing with others as to such public accommodations. The necessity being admitted, as I believe it generally is, the first thing is to enquire if it be practicable at all, and if so, how and what are the best means of doing it. It is right to premise, that the Inhabitants are at this time obliged to keep their pavements in repair; but this does not go the length of implying a right in them to sustain such an heavy expence as the modern improved manner of paving will ocyour wealth and understanding, than the poor employ of fox-killing. But probably you may say, that 'tis the manly exercise of riding, and the salutary benefit we receive from the air, is our principal inducement to the chase. That certainly is the most reasonable, and I was going to say only excuse a sensible man can make for it; but, Gentlemen, if you give me leave, I will take the liberty to point out to you a much more rational amusement, and what will redound more to your honor and reputation, and wherein you will likewise have the salutary benefit of air and exercise, and in the stead of receiving the curses of the poor industrious husbandman, he will be giving you his blessings; and in the stead of being a scourge to your neighbourhood, it will be deriving the greatest advantage from you.

My plan is, Gentlemen, for you to study the sciences, and more particularly Agriculture, where there is so large a field for you to display your abilities in, and which is like a boundless ocean, where the farther you go the farther you'll find you may proceed; and was you to spend your time in making various experiments in husbandry, how much for your country's benefit would such time be then employed, and how well might you exercise the body on your favourite animal, by riding about your fields to superintend their execution; and how pleasing to an enlarged mind, thus employed, to see the progress and result of such experiments; what a business for the mind, as well as body, to examine every progress of vegetable nature, and discover to the ignorant husbandman, when his sowing hard might be necessary, and when not; and if your fortune was affluent, how much better than in filthy kennels would it be employed, to encourage by rewards any agricultural experiments that might tend to improvement; and by thus creating a competition among the farmers, bring husbandry to that state of perfection which it never will be likely to arrive at, while it meets with, and hath to contend against so many enemies to impede its progress; and those among you, who are possessed of large landed property, how much better would it be for him to attend to the improvement of his estates, by holding out such rewards to his tenants, as to induce them to go on with spirited improvements; and was you able, by your acquired knowledge and attention, to cause (as a certain writer observes) a blade of grass to grow on a spot where it before was barren, you would be of more real service to your country than all the philosophers and Fox-Hunters put together.

A HINT TO THE PLAIN FARMER.

To the Printers of the KENTISH GAZETTE.

I HAVE read in your useful paper several well-written letters on a subject of general complaint in the country; I mean the great increase of foxes, and the mischief done to the farmers by the hunters. The letters, attributed to a lady, do credit to a female pen. They are written with great taste and elegance, but I cannot say they contain much good argument. The lady herself seems conscious of the defect, and has recourse to the shameful custom, too often practised at the bar in a bad cause, the custom of brow-beating the witnesses. I must do her opponents the justice to say, that they treat her with a marked deference and respect, a compliment undoubtedly due to the sex. Indeed, in all controversy it redounds much to the credit of the writers to carry it on with good temper and good manners. The lady has very properly and very pointedly touched upon the Maidstone farmers. Their opposition is a disgrace to them. But will this lady give me leave to ask her a plain question? When the paving of a neighbouring town was in agitation and similar objections were made against it, will this lady say that she does not know a fox-hunter, a gentleman of "fortune" and "consequence," who was the most strenuous, and to the last, an opposer of that very useful undertaking? If this lady does not know him--every body in FAVERSHAM does.

To A FARMER, on FOX-HUNTING.

MANY bills for repairs on farms in this vicinity have been enquired into, and not a single post, rail, stile or gate, is chargeable to the devastation of the fox-hunter; and, on a comparison of twenty years repairs, they are not more expensive than usual: so that fact and experience are entirely against your calculation of fox-hunting mischief being adequate to a land-tax of two shillings in the pound.

If you expect to farm without losses, or to live without incidental impediments, you will be mistaken; the world is not made for one set of men to attract all advantages to themselves. Fox-hunters by no means desire to impede your rights or any man's. If they see you fanciful of being aggrieved, where they cannot perceive your grievance realized, they pity your error. You cannot persuade the neighbourhood that the evils, which you complain of, are sustained. The anonymous call of a meeting at Sittingbourne, (where no ordinary was ordered and not one individual attended) plainly shews that no one had such dreadful injuries to be redressed; and it is not clear that you are not the author of that advertisement. If a fox offends you, you are at liberty to destroy him: but if you expect the country to rise in arms to extirpate the whole race; it is a piece of generalship and Quixotism, that will have few or no attendants.

You disclaim being personal, and yet point out who is always to be at home or always absent. Permit every one to do their duty by their own sense and discretion, and not by your's: if they act conscientiously, and have many important concerns on their hands; do not blame them, because they cannot give up all their time to one object to the neglect of other necessary attentions.

The public has been sufficiently fatigued with this subject. I resign it to you. The fox-hunt has my hearty good wishes for its continuance, under the same respectable patronage and exertion.

Instances of Generosity and Beneficence.

GENEROUS and beneficent actions are always worthy of record; the living are stimulated to imitate such examples, and posterity may imitate the same.

Thus also are the truly good-hearted often prevented from doing that justice to indigent merit, which otherwise a natural impulse of the human mind would direct them to do.

EUPHRASIA.

FAVERSHAM, March 12, 1791.

PARIS, March 3.

While the plot against public order was carrying on at Vincennes, another of an infinitely more serious nature was on the tapis at the Louvre. A numerous cohort of suspicious men were found in the different apartments of the Palace; the national soldiers on duty, who were to have been relieved at twelve o'clock, justly alarmed for the heir to the empire (in whose chamber a Chevalier de Court was discovered with a naked dagger) begged to be reinforced, and allowed to remain with their cannon to protect the King and the Royal Family; in the evening, the number of suspicious persons increased, as did the apprehensions of the volunteer guard. Just fear at length engaged them to search the intruders, when they were all found armed with pistols, cutlasses, and daggers adroitly concealed; those who were prudent enough not to resist were dismissed quietly, but the refractory were roughly handled by the guards, and confined in the Abbey of St. Germain, until further orders.

M. de la Fayette, after his expedition to Vincennes, immediately appeared at the Louvre; where he severely reprimanded the gentlemen of the chamber in waiting, for their conduct in admitting persons thus armed who were all determined Aristocrates, and by diverting the attention of the national troops by the commotion at Vincennes, had hoped to take away the King--among those confined are the sons of the Duke de Villequier and of M. Berthier. The King, on this occasion, gave signal proofs of his attachment to the cause of freedom--on being informed, by those over-officious gentry, that their intent was to ward off every harm from his sacred person, for which they were ready to spill their blood, he answered--"if you wish to guard me, put on a blue coat with white facings, and fall into the national ranks; for I consider this excess of your zeal as very suspicious!"

It would require a volume to relate the MEMORABILIA of Monday.

Notwithstanding the decree of the King, sanctioned by the National Assembly, the people of Arnay le-Duc will not allow Melidames, the King's aunts, to proceed on their pilgrimage.

It was yesterday announced to the Assembly that four bodies of troops, each consisting of sixty thousand men, were ready to invade France, sixty thousand of whom were destined for the capital--the information comes from Mess. Dufrenoi, sen. and jun. who PAR PROVISION are in safe custody.

M. d'Aiguillon, a democratic member, who spends more time every morning in putting on paint and delicacy, than in the study of oratory and politics, rose on Tuesday to speak to a question. The President, having told him that another honourable member had put his eye first, M. d'Aiguillon, whose vanity was wounded by it, sat down; on which an Aristocrate thus addressed the chief of the Assembly--"Mr. President, as our nation has ever distinguished itself by its attention to the FAIR SEX, I move that M. d'Aiguillon be indulged in a little self-conversation."

The vanquished party give out that Cromwell's bust is immediately to be teared in the Jacobin's Club.

As the new Bishops, accompanied by the National Guards, were proceeding the other day to the Louvre, a fish-woman exclaimed--"there go the Bishops surrounded by their Clergy."

The anti-anglican, Mr. Beckford, continues here, and affords an uninterrupted round of festivity to all the gentlemen of his numerous acquaintance.

THE INVENTORS OF CANTERBURY MUSLINS.
CALLAWAY and SON,
CANTERBURY MUSLIN MANUFACTURERS

TO HER MAJESTY AND THE ROYAL FAMILY,
MOST respectfully return thanks to the Nobility and Gentry, for the kind encouragement they have been pleased to bestow on them, for that cheap and elegant article called CANTERBURY MUSLINS; by a strict attention to the same line of conduct they have hitherto pursued, hope to meet with a continuance of their support.

Their patterns are entirely of their own invention, and of a fineness and texture superior to most of those kinds of goods in the market. The many hundreds that have been imported of the public, under that name, are inferior in the value of the fabric, and measure, full 20 per cent.—It is now three years since they first invented that genteel article; and during that time, they have given it their strictest attention and have been happy to acquire the Ladies, they have for their inspection a large collection of improved and new patterns of those goods, most of them of a style different to any thing ever made before in this kingdom. The success they have met with has put it in their power to increase their number of looms, that all orders are executed in a much shorter space of time than they used to be; two or three weeks is the utmost they require from the time the order is given, even in the richest and newest of their patterns.

N. B. CALLAWAY and SON beg the public to observe, they continue selling black Amoxines, Latestings, Modes, Perfumery, and other articles of Millinery and Millinery, at their usual moderate prices.

PALACE-STREET, CANTERBURY, Aug 1791.

IT is remembered, that on the sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, Edward Maynard, of the parish of Deal, within the liberty of the said town and borough of Deal, in the said county of Kent, vicar, was duly convicted before me, James Shipden, Esquire, Mayor, and one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said town and borough of Deal, in pursuance of an act passed in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of his present Majesty King George the Third, for that the said Edward Maynard did keep a certain carriage with four wheels to be employed as a public stage carriage, for the purpose of conveying passengers for hire to and from different places within the kingdom of Great Britain (that is to say) for the purpose of conveying passengers for hire from the town of Deal, in the county of Kent aforesaid, to the city of Canterbury within the said county, and so from the city of Canterbury aforesaid to the town of Deal aforesaid; and that the said Edward Maynard, did on the 3d day of August instant, at Deal aforesaid, let out the said carriage to convey passengers for hire from the town of Deal aforesaid to the said city of Canterbury, without the authority of a licence first had and obtained from his Majesty's Commissioners for managing the duties on stamped vellum, parchment and paper, or any person duly authorized by them to grant the same, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided.—And I do declare and adjudge that he, the said Edward Maynard, has forfeited for his said offence the sum of TEN POUNDS of lawful money of Great Britain, which sum of TEN POUNDS I do hereby mitigate to the sum of FIVE POUNDS of like lawful money, to be distributed as the law directs.—And I do hereby order and adjudge the said Edward Maynard to pay the sum of Two POUNDS and Two SHILLINGS for the costs and charges attending his said conviction.—Given under my hand and seal, at Deal aforesaid, this sixth day of August.

THE Gentry and Public in and near the City of Canterbury are hereby respectfully informed, that from and after the 12th instant, the price of TABLE BEER will be 12s. per barrel, for ready money. It is humbly presumed the Public will not think themselves aggrieved by this necessary advance, it being no more than the legal price fixed by Act of Parliament in 1782, and at which price it has been in general sold for at London and other parts of the Kingdom, Canterbury excepted; where the Table Beer Brewers have endeavoured, ever since that period, to accommodate the Public with that article at 12s. per barrel, which has long been found insufficient to produce a commodity worthy the name it bears, and to the give the Brewer a reasonable profit. We whose names are hereunto subjoined, beg leave to assure our friends and the Public, that it is our determination to spare no cost or pains to merit their support and encouragement in producing a TABLE BEER which may be a wholesome and nourishing beverage. The necessity of body to produce these effects will we presume (when the price of ingredients, the high duties on them and the commodity when produced) be a sufficient plea to the Public for this act of their obliged MANUFACTURERS.

For the KENTISH GAZETTE.
To Sir HORACE MANN.

SIR,

BEING one among the many thousands that is an admirer of your private as well as public character (a proof of which I not long since had a pleasing opportunity of evincing at Sandwich.) It is with the deepest regret I address you on a subject, the foundation of which I flatter myself is groundless.---It has been publicly asserted that you intend opposing the bill in parliament for paving, &c. the town of Deal.---I am too well persuaded your grateful temper will not suffer you to pursue a measure so detrimental to the interest of a town already labouring under the cruel rod of oppression, and whose inhabitants lately (notwithstanding every threatening menace) boldly stood forth your avowed friends, and I am bold to say, that the conduct of some of them on that occasion, stands unparalleled as men of strict honor and integrity.---I will only beg leave farther to observe, that it is the general wish of the inhabitants and of every well wisher to the town, that it may be paved, as it is the only thing wanting from its pleasing situation (the delightful country about it, the agreeable and entertaining prospect of the Downs, its vicinity to France, and its conveniency for bathing) to make it the most delightful situation on the coast of England.

I am with respect,

SIR,

Your most obedient
Very humble servant,

PETITION.

The executors of Lord Dudley and Ward presented a petition to the House complaining that their names were among the list of subscribers for a canal between Birmingham and Worcester, which they had not given any authority to this purpose and were so far from wishing to subscribe any sum of money to the carrying on of this canal, that their prayer of their petition was to be heard by Court against it.

Ordered to be referred to a select Committee to report upon it.

The Committee to consist of Mr. Baker, Mr. Lygon, Sir J. Jervis, Lord Beauchamp, the Members for Worcester, &c.

SUGAR.

It was moved, that there be laid before the House the quantity of sugar and rum exported and imported into this kingdom from the first of January till the 31st of December, 1790, together with the amount of the duties and drawbacks. Ordered.

EXTRAORDINARIES OF THE ARMY.

The Secretary of War brought up an estimate of the Extraordinaries of the Army, Half-pay List, and Pences of the Independent Companies, &c.

These papers were ordered to lie on the table.

He said, he meant to refer them to the Committee of Supply on Friday se'nnight.

General Burgoyne hoped that Friday se'nnight would be an open day, as he, pursuant to his notice, meant to make some observations on these papers that day.

EXTRAORDINARIES OF THE NAVY AND ORDNANCE.

An estimate of the Extraordinaries of the Navy was brought up by Mr. Hopkins, and those of Ordnance by Mr. Crawford. Ordered to lie on table.

Mr. Pitt brought in the bill for appropriating the public service 500,000l. from the unclaimed dividends.

This bill was read a first time, and was ordered to be read a second time next Tuesday.

Terms, 18 Guineas per annum.

FROM a conviction, that where a greater number of young Gentlemen are admitted, an equal attention cannot be paid in every department, Mr. COOPER thinks it advisable to limit his number to forty.

A COUNTY HOSPITAL,

It was unanimously resolved,

THAT the subscriptions already received are sufficient to warrant a resolution of carrying into execution the building of the Hospital, under the denomination of the General Kent and Canterbury Hospital; but, as a larger sum is necessary for the full completion of the benevolent institution, further subscriptions are strongly solicited, to which it is hoped that the inhabitants of the principal Towns in the County will contribute.

HOTHFIELD, Jan. 13, 1791.

BY the advice of my friends I do hereby contradict the sale of the HORSES, advertised by Mr. John Quibampton to be sold at the Saracen's Head in Ashford on Saturday next, which he calls his property, as he can claim but one to be so, a Grey Gelding got by Metamorphose; the other four are the property of Mr. Thomas West at Hothfield, and are not to be disposed of.

THOMAS WEST.

THE several persons to whom Henry Cock, late of the parish of Cheriton, in the county of Kent, Mariner, deceased, stood indebted at the time of his decease, are desired to meet the Trustees of his estate and effects, at the King's Arms in the town of Folkestone, in Kent, on Tuesday the 8th day of February, 1791, at ten in the forenoon, in order that those persons who have not executed the Deeds of Trust may then execute the same, when it is proposed to make a dividend to such persons who already have, or shall then and there establish, and prove their debts agreeable to the tenor of the said trust; and all persons not then executing the said Trust Deeds, and establishing and proving their several debts, will be excluded all benefit under the said Trust.

HENRY GRICE, late of Dover, but now of St. Lawrence, in the Isle of Thanet, Bricklayer, do acknowledge that I was mistaken in the sum of money demanded by me from Thomas Pilcher, of Dover aforesaid, Shoemaker, for altering and repairing a dwelling-house in Bulwark-street, as Mr. Pilcher had before paid to me all he had agreed to do. And I do hereby in this public manner acknowledge my error, and ask pardon of Mr. Pilcher, for any speeches and reports, which I may have set about in this business prejudicial to his character. Witness my Hand this 12th Day of January, 1791.
