

NEVER GET TOUGH WITH A TAXIMAN

Taxi-drivers find it's handy to have a few judo holds up their sleeves—just in case there's ever a killer in the back seat . . .

The remains of a grocer's shop at Bridge, near Canterbury, yesterday after a 30-ton lorry had crashed into it, killing the driver, Mr Reginald Christopher, 53, a married man, of Dagenham, Essex, and hurling Angela Lewis (right), 15, daughter of Mr Colin Lewis, the shopkeeper, and his wife, across her bedroom as she slept. The narrow High Street is part of the A2 London-Dover Road and villagers have been campaigning for a by-pass.

