Former inn is restored

A recently-restored Bridge house which dates back to the 16th Century has been made an official historic building of Kent by the County Council.

The house is The Ship, in the High Street, home of Mr Walter Turner. He bought the house five years ago and is still making improvements. He had a £2,000 County Council grant for the work and has also spent much of his own money — although he is unsure of the amount.

A conservation order was put on the house and Mr Turner asked the County Council to consider making it an historic building. Last week he heard the council had agreed and soon the red diamond-shaped plaque will be put up outside.

Explaining the building's history, Mr Turner said it was originally a yeoman's house built about 1530. In Elizabethan times a cottage was added on one end and in Georgian times it was a public house — The Ship — and was later converted to four homes.

Mr Turner has restored it to its original form and name. He has done much of the work himself and of the award of the plaque he said: "I am awfully proud."

One of the unusual features of the house is an oast which cannot be seen from the front of the building.
